A Canadian Trench Raid

Enemy Would Rather Face Anything Than the Canadians

The Germans have admitted at last that when it comes to a direct attack upon their trench lines, they would sooner have any other force against them than the Canadians. They possess a fearlessness, united to a coolness of action, that entirely distinguishes them. In its reports, the Canadian War Records office describes one of these raids made upon the enemy, which simply bears out the verdict of the enemy. Stripped of all verbiage the account is as follows:

Our counter-attack was delivered at an early hour the following morning. Several parties took part in the operation. Under cover of the intense artillery barrage the attacking parties went up outside our trench lines, and then advanced against the enemy trenches on a frontage of over 600 yards, including the well-known and strongly-fortified position known as "The Knoll".

The Germans for the most part were still covering in their dug-outs when our men poured in their shells. On the left there was a strong resistance from the direction of the "Triangle," the Germans attempting to bomb down to the assistance of the position directly attacked. However, the party detailed to protect the flank field fire, and thus permitted another party to penetrate across several lines of trenches to a depth of about 700 yards. Any Germans who resisted were quickly shot or bayoneted, and many dug-outs from which the enemy refused to emerge, were bombed and then destroyed by portable charges. A probe was left alive in the whole area over which our attack was made.

Sappers and pioneers who accompanied the raid located three large mine shafts, which they completely wrecked. The enemy retaliation was directed at part upon his own front line. We remained in possession of the Canadian trenches for nearly an hour, and finally withdrew, taking with us 47 prisoners of the 11th Bavarian Regiment, including one officer and two N.C.O.s.

Sunshine will eventually puncture the thickest cloud.

Tall Building in the World to Be Erected in Detroit

Plans for what is expected to be the tallest building in the world—57 stories—to cost $15,000,000 and capable of accommodating 10,000 people, have just been completed by a Detroit architect. Options have been obtained on a $3,000,000 site owned by Michigan and Cass avenues, Lake Boulevard and Adams streets, and tentative tenders have been called for.

The building as planned will be a city in itself, with a postoffice, police station, arena, seating 10,000 people, a quarter-mile track, and an auditorium with 30,000 capacity.

The plan calls for a 27-story hotel and 37 stories of offices, running up into a tower 608 feet high, as compared with the 789 feet of the Woolworth building, New York. Two airplane landings 30 feet wide by 60 feet long will be located on the roof. According to the plans there will be 4,312 rooms. The foundations will be carried to bed rock. In the basement will be located 304 display rooms. There will be seven banquet halls, two small convention halls, a service-entrance, one dining room, two ball rooms, and a stage on the second floor of the building.

Canadian Made Lead Pencils

Substantial Orders Have Been Received Here From New Zealand

One of the developments in stimulating Canadian trade is seen in the fact that Canadian-made lead pencils are now being sold in New Zealand. A report received by the Canadian Trade Commission of Auckland, says that a Canadian firm recently sent out to New Zealand samples of lead pencils, the first made in Canada, following the stopping of the Australian supply. Mr. Beddo says that the samples were found very satisfactory and substantial orders have been sent to the manufacturer.

He also notes that if Canadian pencils are now being sold in New Zealand, a much greater proportion of the business formerly done by Germany. During the past year at least 100,000 pencils were sold in New Zealand orders offered to Canadian firms could be filled.

Rations and Health

The Soldier Relies on an Abundant Supply of Good, Pure Water

Last September General Halp instituted enquiry into the feeding of the troops. With experts from the War Office, bread, meat, butter, tea, coffee and cocoa, etc., were examined on the spot. On the whole, the commission reported favorably and satisfied themselves that the methods of inspection could not be improved upon. Standards, quantities, and freshness of delivery however, were revised with the result that officers and doctors are unanimous in doing that the care with which rations are handled accounts for the splendid health of the troops. Simultaneous with this, attention was paid to the water question, and it is interesting to note that a soldier has to say on the "dry," "I quid at the front. There is no drink that a soldier relishes more than good, clean, pure water. When one's pluck has been got levelled by a steady sipping, anything that will give you ginger for the job is portable and will keep in the water-bottle, and the soldier loves his water. Since the beginning of the war the water has not only improved but is served with more expedition, and every one has a good word to say about the water-bottle."

English Navy to Have 400,000 Men

It has already been announced that the Royal Navy of the United Kingdom in 1917-18 is to be 400,000 officers and men. A supplementary estimate provides for the addition of 50,000 of all ranks during the current financial year. With the passing of this vote the aggregate of 400,000 will already have been provided for, the original estimate for 1916-17 having been 350,000.—London Telegraph.

The Angel Child

Endurance of Spirits Seems to Be Necessary if the Child is to Amount to Anything

Dr. Frank H. Croves, social hygiene specialist of Boston, issues a statement which should discourage parents who are in the habit of boasting of the goodness of their offspring. He says that the child who is called a "good" child, whose parents are usually stupid, hereditary defective and rascally, boisterous, trouble-making youngsters.

Two kinds of juvenile badness are recognized even by childless observers in the average home—the badness of selfishness, pugnacity and cruelty and the badness of excessive vitality, which manifests itself in incontinence and uproar.

Dogs and Cats in War

Are Put to Good Use in Ridding the Camps of Rodents

Hundreds of cats and thousands of dogs are now serving their countries at the front. The canines have a wide range of talents, according to breed and training. Sledge dogs are used in transporting supplies over the mountains in the winter months, and big Belgian dogs also draw machine guns.

The "No Man's Land" of the front is a most dangerous place for the soldier. The demand for cats as mouse catchers and for dogs as rat catchers is greater than the supply. From all over France cats have been shipped to the front to conserve the precious food supply from the ravages of rodents.

In the early months of trench warfare the cats were used to kill rats, but this problem has now been solved by the use of the military authorities. They announced that each platoon fetching a rat-catching dog to the front was rewarded with a two days' additional leave of absence in the home.

order was issued every soldier who kills his home makes it a point to find a rat or a mouse to take back to the front with him. Each owner of a cat also entitled to a small sum for each rat killed and the fortunate owner of an antiparasitic dog is greatly envied by his comrades. The dogs and cats who serve their country in this way are favorites with the soldiers, and they find life easy and agreeable, with lots of sport and plenty of eat. Fido has only to bark or Puss to move to induce the platoon to divide up their food.

And Travelling Bag

A Unique Invention That Would

Preserve not only to look like an ordinary travelling bag but to be used as one under ordinary conditions, a life preserver that has just been invented apparently provides a resuable means of the problem of saving a sea in time of sudden emergency.

The bag is equipped with a false bottom that serves to hold in folded position a water-tight union suit which is stashed in such a way that it can be pulled out and used as a water-tight suit.

In an emergency all that is necessary is to dump out the contents of the bag, remove the false bottom to let the suit unfold, and get inside. The user then closes and locks the top over his head and jumps into the water, the required buoyancy being supplied by the bag. The body of the bag is equipped with a window and with valves that admit air but not water. Inside, there is space for storing food and water sufficient to last several days. To prevent disaster in case the water-tight suit is punctured, an air-filled bag that is easily inflated is attached in the travelling bag.

Doing What He Don't

A Kansas hotelkeeper gives out as a souvenir a satirical tag, bearing the name of the hotel and the announcement "We do not advertise."

What is he spending his good money for?

Replies To Private Pest

Blairmore, 24th April, 1917.
To the Editor of the "Enterprise":

Sir: I have been very much interested in reading the letter of Private Pest, which appeared in your issue of April 13th. The letter is intended as a reply to the protest which I made through the Enterprise a few weeks ago, but a careful reading of Private Pest's communication reveals the fact that, from beginning to end, he neither misquotes me, misrepresents the statements which I made, attributes to me an attitude which I never dreamed of taking, or misses the point altogether.

Adopting a different method from that of our good friend, who states that he will not answer my letter in detail, I will set in particular pains to answer his arguments, point by point.

Private Pest states that since returning from the front he has addressed over 200 separate audiences, comprising over 6,000 people, and that I am the first man to criticize publicly the run ration statement which he made. Now, really, that is a most unlooked for distinction. But, strange to say, I do not feel the least uncomfortable in the position accorded me. Moreover, I should quite as readily make the same claim were I the only one among the eight million inhabitants of Canada to protest against the run ration. There is at least one man in this Dominion who cannot be named. Actually, however, my position is no so extraordinary. For, while it may be true enough that the veteran's "run ration statement" has not been criticized heretofore, it may be used to Private Pest to be told that the run ration has called forth protest after protest through the pages of our public press, and has been the subject of many a condemnatory resolution on the part of various organizations.

Private Pest intimates that, originally, my letter is written in ignorance of the conditions of trench warfare, even after having listened to his speech. Ignorant of trench conditions in general, and of trench warfare, but I would point out to your correspondent that my protest did not profess to be based upon personal knowledge of the conditions of trench warfare, but upon physiological and moral grounds—grounds which your correspondent has not yet proved to be irrational or unscientific. Moral principles are not abrogated, physiological processes are not reversed, and the laws of nature are not suspended, just because so many millions of human beings are fighting in trenches. I did listen very attentively to Private Pest's highly interesting and most illuminating recital of his experiences; but he failed to address one fact which could convince me that his position is neither tenable.

Private Pest intimates that he will be glad to meet me in public, and debate this particular question. As to that, if our friend could prove that any real or lasting good would result from such a debate, I should be quite happy to accommodate him. To Private Pest, doubtless, such an occasion would seem highly profitable; but to me it could not appear otherwise than as a new idea in cheap melodrama. It is not that the question might not be highly entertaining. Private Pest and I—probably without any surrender to humility—might even flatter ourselves with the prospect of a crowded house. But cheap notoriety for the principle would seem to be the chief advantage accruing. The run ration is really only part of a larger issue; and neither the greater nor the lesser issue is likely to be decided by a formal debating of the question in some corner of Alberta.

In quoting himself as saying that the run ration was not compulsory, Private Pest is entirely besides the point. My charge had nothing to do with whether the run ration was, or was not, compulsory. I protested against the substance of the run ration at all, and the glorification of that institution before the youth of the land. It surely doesn't take any more than an ordinary amount of intelligence to recognize that institutions does not need to be compulsory patronage in order to make it harmful. The experience of the world with the liquor traffic is general, running through many centuries, should be evidence enough.

Still further, your correspondent quotes himself as saying that the run ration is given to the soldiers by the battalion doctors as a "medicine."

My contention was, and is, that while alcoholic liquor has been, and is, commonly administered as a stimulant, it is becoming increasingly less so used; for there are other and better stimulants—real stimulants, I should say. Apart from that circumstance, however, I might remark that, from the recital of Private Pest himself, and from the reports of other retired soldiers whom I have heard speaking on the question, it would appear to be a grossly through distortion of the "medicine"—quite as general, in fact, as in the case of the regular food ration. Evidently, every soldier in the trenches is a patient, and every man takes his "medicine," except in those cases in which the man has backbone enough to say

"No."

Once more, Private Pest—referring to my quoting him as saying that the run ration "makes the chill of feet warm and feel happy"— declares that he didn't use the word "happy." Let me explain that in employment of the word I was seeking merely to convey the "sense" of the speaker's words; and the phrases "feel warm" and "feel happy" were intended to suggest the physical and psychical effects of alcohol upon the soldier, as reported by the speaker of the evening. There is no need that we should apply hairs of literalness.

Again, Private Pest writes: "Mr.

Pest intimates that the soldier is incapable of doing the kind of work which he is doing." And the suggestion is a gross misrepresentation. What I protest against is the use of the run ration, even in those of "two teaspoons" and what I deplore is the very great probability that, in a large number of cases, the soldier will EVENTUALLY become addicted to the use of alcoholic liquors.

Private Pest stumbles over my remark that "few are in a position to dispute his statements." He wonders whether I intend to suggest that he is making untruthful statements.

No, Private Pest—I consider that beneath me. But I would point out that there is a real and logical distinction between reporting facts as actually observed and the drawing of conclusions from these facts. Between keen observation and absolute truthfulness, on the one hand, and constructive deduction, on the other, there is a world of difference.

That, I take it, is all that need be said on this point.

Private Pest declares that "prohibition has nothing to do with the run ration." This is the most absolute statement. In my humble opinion, and in the opinion of a great many others, prohibition has everything to do with the run ration. It is the most absolute folly to prevent our soldiers from getting liquor in the home land, only to do them with it when they get to the trenches.

Your correspondent declares: "I am one of the greatest advocates of temperance myself." Yes, I have met them before. I have been meeting them for years. In fact, certain parts of Canada they "grow on every tree." And I have actually heard saloon-keepers announce themselves as red-hot temperance advocates, and have beheld them swig crocodile tears over the ruinous effects of alcohol—only to observe them rub their palms together in sug satisfaction over the long lines of victuaries that filed through the streets. Private Pest informs us that out of 600 soldiers who have returned to Edmonton, he can get ninety-nine percent of them who will talk in favor of the run ration. That may be true. But far from this proving the wisdom of issuing the run ration, it is really one of the most damning admissions that our friend could make. It is a plain fact. It only becomes to prove my contention that the measure of alcohol is a real one, in its insidious mastery of the man, physically, mentally, and morally.

Your correspondent refers to a clergyman in Coleman, who acted as the "week's chairman" at a meeting held in that town, and who, judging from certain remarks of his, made in introducing the speaker, "has grasped the significance of trench warfare sufficiently to broaden his mind to the usefulness and necessity of run issued to the soldiers in the trenches." Now, I do not happen to know which of the clergymen of Coleman Private Pest refers to, but you will permit me to say that, in any case, I do not hold myself responsible for the conscience or for the point of view of another man, be he clergyman or layman. As to the introduction that I am one who loses in breadth of view, I think I can afford to smile. Moreover, I think I have made myself clear, that I dispute both the "usefulness" and the "necessity" of the run ration.

Finally, Private Pest reports having seen Major the Rev. John Pringle

"take his lot from after" clipping the tee from his legs, the result of a night's rowing in water, mud, and blood. Now, I know Dr. Pringle only by reputation, yet I do not doubt that he is "one of the oldest, most respected and loved chaplains in the Canadian Army in the field." But all this does not prove his wisdom in going rum as he is reported to have done. Do I believe that Major the Rev. John Pringle will become a drunkard in the course of five years?

Quite possible, indeed; that even his revered chaplain could become so

IN TIME, were the habit to fasten itself upon him. The laws of nature do not as a rule, grant immunity to any man on the ground that he is chaplain, and old, and respected, and loved. Incidentally, I might draw the veteran's attention to the fact that the words which I used when I said that a "drunkard is not made in a day, or a month, or a year, nor

NECESSARILY in two years or five years. But the amusing thing to me is that Private Pest should appear to a clergyman, as such, for evidence that the run ration is "useful" and "necessary." I was really glad to see any clergyman were so "convinced" as to the utility and necessity of the run ration.

I would commend the foregoing to the careful patient and reflection of Private Pest.

Thanking you, once more, for your space,

I am, Sir,

yours respectfully,

EDWIN HERBERT GRAY

Spring Clean-Up

Getting Rid of Ashes and Refuse

Leaves Much Space for Garden

Throughout the Dominion the disappearance of the snow reveals the accumulations of ash and refuse and other refuse, which, owing to the covering nature, are not visible during the winter. For this reason it is necessary that an outdoor cleanup be made, as well as an indoor cleanup. To accomplish this work systematically, the "clean-up week" has been inaugurated in many municipalities, and in doing so many municipalities to adopt efficient means to the end.

Preparations should be undertaken at one for this annual event. The people must be educated to a thorough overhauled of their premises, both inside and out. Much refuse material, probably the accumulation of years, will be found serving only to harbor dirt. This should be either disposed of to those who can use it or destroyed. Fires of apparently unknown origin can frequently be traced to these accumulations in attics or other out-of-the-way storage spaces. Clean them out, and instead of wondering what to do with them, there will be a feeling that they are gone.

Clean-up the area around the home.

Dispose of the ashes, and you will be surprised at the extent of garden you will be able to cultivate from the apparently useless surroundings of the home.

An encouragement to the people the municipal authorities should do their part. There should be an early start made on street cleaning and the opening up of cul-de-sacs, and provision should be made for the removal of the refuse collected by householders.

Canada's season for outdoor life is not long, and it should not be allowed to slip in cleaning up and making preparations for our gardens, streets and open spaces.

Live Merchants Make Their Advertising of Immediate Value To You.

They know that "purse interest" is very strong with you these days. If they are able to offer you a money-saving opportunity they will tell you about it promptly in their advertisements.

They know that you expect them to keep you in touch with their "store news." They will give you the store news while it is fresh and valuable to you---while it is current news.

They know that you buy "in the light"--that you want to know about commodities and their selling prices--that you have abandoned the old habit of "shopping around" and that you visit stores with previously formed plans for your buying.

Knowing these things, live merchants tell you their store news in every issue of this paper.

Mrs. Muir was presented with a beautiful out-glass cream jug and sugar bowl by her lady friends, while Mr. Muir was made the recipient of a beautiful gold watch, suitably engraved, by his gentlemen friends, with the hope that they would always remember their friends in The Pass. The Ten Commandments in Germany

In all trials are printed the following "Ten Commandments":
 1. Don't eat more than necessary. Don't eat from meals.
 2. Consider bread sacred. Use every little piece.
 3. Be economical with butter and fat. Use lard instead of butter. Most of the fat we get from abroad.
 4. Use milk and cheese.
 5. Use much sugar. Sugar is nourishing.
 6. Boil potatoes with the skins on; then nothing is lost in peeling.
 7. Drink beer, beer and alcohol, then the supply of rye from which these are made will be greater.
 8. Eat vegetables and fruit. Plant vegetables in every little piece of earth.
 9. Be economical with preserved vegetables.
 10. Gather all you don't eat for the animals.
 11. Cook with gas and coke. The sales from coke make good fertilizer.
 12. Moral—Obey these ten commandments and economize for the Fatherland. The strict must follow these commandments.

A view at the amount of work being accomplished by the C.P.R. in the Frank slide should convince one of the advisability of the government requiring the use of that same steam shovel for the opening up of a safe and good traffic road through the slide. By this means the road could be built at far less cost than by any other method.
